Trained extremists heading to Europe

PARIS, France (AFP) - A group of 25 Islamist extremists is planning to return to Europe after combat training in the Afghan-Pakistani border regions, French intelligence officials said yesterday, citing a US tip-off. The warning came at a time of high alert for possible attacks in European countries following warnings by several countries.

The source said US intelligence services alerted their counterparts in Europe to the group's activities "a few weeks" ago and the warning was reiterated by British authorities.

One French official said the group of 25 has experience of fighting in the lawless border region where US-led forces are trying to root out leaders of the Al-Qaeda network, and could be able to organise other extremists in Europe.

A busy rainy season requires greater public diligence in the prevention of Dengue

Director of Dept of Health Derick Ian Blok and team

Aruba's "Dengue Team" lead by the Director of the Department of Health Derick Ian Blok and Minister of Public Health, Sport and Drugs, Richard Visser remind island residents and businesses to be very conscientious regarding prevention of the proliferation of the Aedes Aegypti mosquito, carrier of the Dengue virus.

Over 2007 and 2008 Aruba and the Caribbean had a similarly busy "rainy season" as this past month, resulting in a spike of reported cases because of accumulated water contributing to mosquito breeding grounds. Canvassing by the health department has found that one in three homes of the areas of greatest concentration of reported Dengue cases have proven to be breeding grounds for the mosquito.

Carbon atom pioneers share Nobel chemistry prize

L. - r. Akira Suzuki, Richard Heck and Ei-ichi Negishi

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AFP) - Three scientists shared the 2010 Nobel Prize for Chemistry yesterday for forging a toolkit to manipulate carbon atoms, paving the way for new drugs to fight cancer and for revolutionary plastics.

Richard Heck of the United States and Ei-ichi Negishi and Akira Suzuki of Japan were hailed for producing "great art in a test tube."

The trio separately made outstanding contributions in organic chemistry, a field whose basis is carbon, one of the essential elements of life and also of innumerable industrial synthetics.

"It is important to emphasise the great significance their discoveries have for both academic and industrial research and in the production of fine chemicals -- including pharmaceuticals, agricultural chemicals and high-tech materials -- that benefit society," the Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences said.

Through their work, organic chemistry has developed into "an art form, where scientists produce marvellous chemical creations in their test tubes," it said.

Heck, 79, retired in 1989 from the University of Delaware in the United States; Negishi, 75, was also based in the United States, at Purdue University in Indiana;

Suzuki, 80, was based at Hokkaido University in Sapporo, Japan.

The trio developed a process known as palladium-catalysed cross coupling, a means of knitting carbon atoms together so that they form a stable "skeleton" for organic molecules.

It has allowed chemists to synthesise compounds to fight colon cancer, the herpes virus and HIV, as well as smarter plastics that are used in consumer applications, such as ultra-thin computer monitors.

The discoveries "have had a great impact on academic research, the development of new drugs and materials, and are used in many industrial chemical processes for the synthesis of pharmaceuticals and other biologically active compounds," the academy said.

The Nobel has been awarded on four previous occasions for breakthroughs in organic chemistry -- in 1912, 1950, 1979 and 2005.

Spanish PM asks Venezuela to probe suspected ETA training

MADRID, Spain (AFP) - Spanish Prime Minister Jose Luis Rodriguez Zapatero yesterday called on Venezuela to respond to his request for help in investigating suspected training of ETA members in the South American country.

"The statements, which have caused this uproar, by two suspected ETA members are enough for the government to launch an inquiry and for the Venezuelan government to give us a response," Zapatero said in an interview with the private Telecinco television station.

Spanish court documents released Monday showed that two suspected members of the armed Basque separatist movement ETA arrested in Spain last week have said they received weapons training in Venezuela.

The suspects said they had met in Venezuela with Arturo Cubillas, who is alleged to be the ETA representative in the country and who was given a senior post in the administration of Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez in 2005.

Yesterday, Foreign Minister Miguel Angel Moratinos met with Venezuela's ambassador, Isaias Rodriguez, to tell him Spain wants "more intense co-operation and concrete and specific actions in relation" to Cubillas, Deputy Prime Minister Maria Teresa Fernandez de la Vega told a news confer-

Guatemala asks US for full disclosure on sex diseases study

GUATEMALA CITY, Guatemala (AFP) - Guatemala yesterday issued a formal request for full disclosure on how US scientists deliberately infected hundreds of people here with sexually transmitted diseases from 1946-1948.

"All of the information has been requested officially but it is still at the university where they found the archives," President Alvaro Colom said of the cases of 1,500 Guatemalans who were used unwittingly in testing that some locals have likened to Nazi experiments.

In a phone conversation with Colom on Friday, US President Barack Obama expressed his deep regret for the experiment conducted by US public health researchers six decades ago and apologized "to all those affected."

The study, which was never published, came to light this year after Wellesley College professor Susan Reverby stumbled upon archived documents outlining the 1940s experiment led by controversial US public health doctor John Cutler.

Cutler and his fellow researchers enrolled people in Guatemala, including mental patients, for the study, which aimed to find out if penicillin, relatively new in the 1940s, could be used to prevent sexually transmitted diseases.

Cutler was also involved in a highly controversial study known as the Tuskegee Experiment in which hundreds of African American men with syphilis were observed but given no treatment for 40 years, between 1932 and 1972.

Colom, who has formed a panel to investigate, said it was "important for Guatemala as a nation to get the investigation done as soon as possible."

At least one patient died during the experiments, although it is not clear whether the death was from the tests or from an underlying medical problem.

Lecture by Chamber of Commerce Relations in a new Dutch Kingdom

ORANJESTAD – The Chamber of Commerce and Industry (KvK) is presenting Prof. Jaime Saleh as the key note speaker during the XVII Annual Business Dinner Meeting (ABDM). Mr. Saleh teaches law at the University of Utrecht. He is the ideal person to elaborate on the changes in the constellation of the Dutch Kingdom and their implications. The presentation will take place on Friday, October 22, 2010 at 7:30 p.m. during the ABDM in the Hyatt Regency Aruba Resort & Casino.

The Netherlands Antilles will cease to exist on October 10, 2010. Curacao and St. Maarten will become autonomous partners in the Dutch Kingdom, while Bonaire, Saba and St. Eustatius will become Dutch municipalities. The new structure will count with four new partners in the Dutch Kingdom, namely Aruba, Curacao, St. Maarten and Holland, each with their own autonomy but with cooperation ties to each other.

With the dismantling of the Netherlands Antilles on 10-10-10 in sight, KvK's XVIIth Annual Business Dinner Meeting's theme will be "The challenging role for Aruba in promoting sustainable cooperation and cohesion between the partners in the Kingdom of the Netherlands, particularly with a view to the new constitutional changes." The KvK has invited former Netherlands Antilles Governor Prof. Mr. Jaime Saleh who is specialized in Constitutional Kingdom Law to share his views on this matter.

Prof. Mr. Saleh was born in Bonaire and attended law school at the University of Utrecht in the Netherlands. After completing his studies he became a Public Prosecutor in the Netherlands. He was appointed Public Prosecutor for the Netherlands Antilles in 1968. From 1971 to 1974 he practiced law in the private sector. In 1974 he was appointed Judge in the Court of Justice of the Netherlands Antilles. He was President of the Common Court of Justice of the Netherlands Antilles and Aruba from 1979-1990.

Prof. Mr. Saleh served as Governor-General of the Netherlands Antilles from 1990 to 2002. He is still active in social, commercial and state affairs. He was made honorary Minister of State of the Netherlands Antilles in 2004 and appointed visiting Professor in Constitutional Kingdom Law at the University of Utrecht, Holland in 2005.

Subtropical Storm Otto forms in Northern Caribbean

COLUMBIA, South Carolina -- As of yesterday afternoon, Subtropical Storm Otto has formed in the northern Caribbean, just 1,000 miles from the Charleston coastline.

Meteorologist Scott Ryan predicts that the threat to South Carolina will be very small.

The storm is moving northwestward towards the United States at about 60 miles an hour. A large area of high pressure over the east coast will deflect the system to the northeast by the weekend. The storm is expected to pose little threat to any part of the United States.

The difference between a tropical storm and a subtropical one is that a subtropical storm oftentimes has a large, cloudless center of circulation, with very heavy thunderstorm activity in a band removed at least 100 miles from the center.

Usually, there is little to no difference in wind speed, but tropical storms tend to contain much more moisture than subtropical ones and can generate a lot more rain.

Aruba Bi-Annual College Fair kicks off this weekend with a special fundraising event at Screaming Eagle Restaurant

Organizing committee of Aruba college fair 2010

Organizers of Aruba's College Fair, a bi-annual event which will take place at the Renaissance Convention Center on Friday and Saturday, November 5 and 6, made their announcement at the Screaming Eagle Restaurant to also bring attention to a first-time fundraising event scheduled for this coming Saturday evening, October 9.

The Aruba College Fair Foundation is celebrating their 10th anniversary of providing information and opportunities for island youth to advance their education and career training, on island or at various institutions around the world. Past college fairs have welcomed representatives from colleges and universities in Holland, the U.S. and Latin America, as well as local companies providing on the job training or financial assistance for candidates who need to study abroad for more advanced positions. This year, institutions from around the Caribbean and Belgium are expected to join the roster.

Mary Wever-Laclé was Minister of Education at the time of the first Aruba College Fair in 2000; she is now head of the foundation's fundraising committee. She described this year's formal fundraising event, titled "Crème de la Crème," which will feature fabulous food from Screaming Eagle's famous Chef Irwin, as well as premium open bar and music and dancing from noted local performer Robert Jeand'or and his band.

Dr. Wubbo Ockels believes in the establishment of an Aruban institute dedicated to renewable energy

Professor Ockels

One of the most exciting bits of news to emerge from the Aruba Green Energy Conference and Trade Fair that took place from September 29 to October 3 was the commitment of Prime Minister Mike Eman and his administration to the establishment of a research bold but timely; physicist Professor Dr. Wubbo Ockels, Holland's first astronaut in space and keynote speaker at the conference's opening event, confirmed his strong interest and likely participation in such a project. During his speech he showed the audience his ocean-going sailboat, which deploys current methods of harnessing wind and solar energy. "I would very much like to sail this boat into Oranjestad Harbor," he told the audience, "and stay on Aruba at least a few months a year," he revealed to THE MORNING NEWS later in the conference.

Dr. Ockels, PhD, is the mentor of the Numa Solar Car project developed by students at Delft Technical University and was instrumental in setting up sustainable activities such as the Frisian Solar Challenge boat races. "I look at the youth, I look at innovation and sus-everyone agrees, are rather turbulent; we are seeing rather fast changes towards a sustainable world, much faster than anyone would think. Many say we can go on as we did before over the next 20 years - business as usual. I am afraid I must disappoint you - or more pleasantly, say we are going to change for a better world. Until then we have some crisis to deal with; climate, financial, resource, mobility and social crisis."

Dr. Ockels then treated delegates at the conference opening luncheon with reliving his experience of venturing into space on Challenger Space Shuttle in 1985 and viewing Earth from this unusual perspective. He had the epiphany of realizing that the only thing separating the totally dead nothingness of space from "Everything that is of importance: life, the people we love, family - all that is Earth, is protected from being nothing by a thin layer of atmosphere, only 20 kilometers thick" similar to the hull of the space shuttle protecting those on board. He then encouraged all to think of themselves as astronauts on Spaceship Earth, and what we must do to protect and maintain the hull.

Dr. Ockels described some of the projects he has been involved with aimed at deploying various forms of "clean," renewable energy. He is very enthusiastic about the use of kites, also known as "kite-planes" or "smart kites," for harnessing wind power, particularly for ships. Keeping in mind that oil reserves are quickly dwindling, he has dedicated his professional career to methods to change to renewable sources. This included the development of a Superbus, which is electrically powered by lithium polymer battery packs and regenerative braking, offering an alternative form of public transport. Using advanced aerospace technology and dynamics the Superbus can transport 23 passengers in extreme comfort at speeds of 250 KMH.

All of this is possible through utilizing energy from the sun. "Here is our most perfect nuclear power plant," he described it. "It burns constantly at a safe distance of a 140 million kilometers from the earth... it is not vulnerable to politics or terrorist attack and there is absolutely plenty of power for everyone; please use it!" Methods to utilize solar power are growing exponentially, with developers dedicated to increasing the efficiency of converting solar power. "We can be optimistic," Dr. Ockels concluded, "and I think optimism is our responsibility. We have a race against the tide, and a race you only win when you are optimistic."

and teaching center dedicated to producing experts and methods of renewable energy.

The concept of such a facility as a way to diversify the island's economy as well as assist it on the road to independence from fossil fuel is tainability, and they are absolutely coupled. Sustainability means we need to change... the stakeholders of the future are the youth and the change needs to be made by innovation."

A busy rainy season requires greater public . . .

Individual households must take precautions to prevent the accumulation of standing water, particularly in plant pots, waste receptacles, pet water dishes, and fountains or pools. Muddy pools of rainwater are not a threat as Aedes Aegypti requires clean water, not dirty, in which to lay their eggs. However, litter which can provide a place for clean water to collect, no matter how small, does present a threat. Eggs of the Aedes Aegypti are also capable of surviving for a year, even after the water has dried up, and can hatch months afterwards, once water collects in the receptacle. Officials recommend the pan under the refrigerator be checked regularly.

Neighborhoods should be conscientious about waste disposal, informing SELIMAR of old tires, appliances and other refuse that can collect water and infest the neighborhood with mosquitoes. Keep eyes open for illegal dumping and inform the authorities of refuse which can provide a breeding ground.

Minister Visser informed of a program for the schools to train children to be vigilante in their home and neighborhoods regarding what constitute breeding grounds for the Aedes Aegypti and how to identify this particular mosquito by its distinctive white markings.

Places where the mosquito breeds

Gabriel Christiaans, in charge of vector control of Dengue, explained there will be a program of spraying for mosquitoes, but it will not be island-wide as it has been in past years. This has proven to not be cost effective, and so this year they will spray in the areas that have shown the greatest concentration of Dengue cases, and are likely principle breeding grounds.

Most of the Caribbean have noted outbreaks of Dengue fever, much greater Aruba, as their has been exceptional amounts of rainfall throughout the region. Large bodies of standing water have been seeded with koi, which devour the eggs and larvae of the Aedes Aegypti mosquito, and these are available free from the health department for individuals with fountains or ponds in their gardens.

"The importance of every suspected case of Dengue being reported to health officials and patients reporting for complete blood testing so proper records can be maintained cannot be over emphasized," stated Derrick Ian Blok. By tracking cases they can see where the mosquito that carries the virus may be prevalent and take precautions. Dengue symptoms include pain in the head, eyes, back and joints, with a general malaise, high fever and rash.

Aruba has mosquitoes which carry three different types of Dengue. It is vital that those suffering from Dengue-type symptoms report to their doctor, who will send them to the lab to confirm Dengue and the particular strain. There are varying degrees of discomfort of the various strains, and once recovered, an individual is immune to that particular strain of Dengue. However, if they are bitten by an Aedes Aegypti mosquito carrying a different strain, the disease can turn deadly. Antibiotics are useless against Dengue, and a doctor's diagnosis and treatment is essential. It is imperative that anyone demonstrating flu like symptoms or those described above be tested. Health Department officials also emphasize the necessity of confirming each individual case of Dengue; patients must report to the public health laboratories for two blood tests; one while sick, the other after the symptoms have passed. Unfortunately many, upon feeling better, go back to work and are too busy to do so. The second test allows them to confirm the strain of Dengue present on Aruba. There is a fourth strain which has not been detected on the island, so far.

In the past quarter century, the incidence of Dengue in the Caribbean has increased enormously; a busy storm season in the Caribbean such as we have had the past month contributes to outbreaks. These can be prevented with public awareness and precautions. Information and pamphlets about detection and prevention are available at all offices of the Department of Public Health, and the office of Communicable Diseases. Call their office at 582-3040, or offices of the Department of Health in Barcadera and Oranjestad at 585-5533 or 582-4200 to acquire koi or to obtain pamphlets to be distributed to groups and businesses.

NASA to launch new mission to Mars

WASHINGTON (AFP) — The US space agency NASA announced it has given the green light to a mission to Mars aimed at investigating the mystery of how the "red planet" lost its atmosphere.

NASA gave the approval Monday for "the development and 2013 launch of the Mars Atmosphere and Volatile Evolution (MAVEN) mission," the agency said in a statement, noting that the project may also show Mars' history of supporting life.

"A better understanding of the upper atmosphere and the role that escape to space has played is required to plug a major hole in our understanding of Mars," said MAVEN's lead investigator Bruce Jakosky of the Laboratory for Atmospheric and Space Physics at the University of Colorado in Boulder.

"We're really excited about having the opportunity

Adobe Fixes 23 Vulnerabilities in Acrobat, Reader

Adobe has released updates to all platforms and versions of Acrobat and Reader to address a total of 23 vulnerabilities. The new, updated versions are 9.4 and 8.2.5.

You can download the current version of Reader either through the Help-Check For Updates feature or by downloading it from the Adobe site. The current version of Reader is always available at <http://get.adobe.com/reader/>. Other products and versions are available at the Adobe Product Updates page. (Reader for UNIX will not be available the get.adobe.com site until October 21; until then it may be downloaded here: ftp://ftp.adobe.com/pub/adobe/reader/unix/9.x/9.4.0.)

Among the vulnerabilities fixed are Flash issues revealed about 2 weeks ago and Acrobat/Reader problems that are almost a month old. Many of these vulnerabilities have been exploited in the wild.

These updates are an early release of the regularly-scheduled updates previously scheduled for Patch Tuesday next week. The next quarterly updates are scheduled for February 8, 2011, but Adobe hasn't often had the luxury of sticking to their schedule.

to address these fundamental science questions," he added.

Three main scientific instruments will be launched to Earth's neighbor aboard a craft in November 2013 as part of the 438-million-dollar project.

Clues on Mars' surface, including features that resemble ancient riverbeds and minerals that could only form in the presence of liquid water, suggest the planet "once had a denser atmosphere, which supported the presence of liquid water on the surface," said NASA.

However, most of the Martian atmosphere was lost as part of a dramatic climate shift.

"Looking forward, we are well positioned for the next push to critical design review in July 2011. In three short years, we'll be heading to Mars!" exclaimed MAVEN project manager David Mitchell of NASA's Maryland-based Goddard Space Flight Center.

"Mars can't protect itself from the solar wind because it no longer has a shield, the planet's global magnetic field is dead," said Jakosky, describing how the magnetic field disappeared and the atmosphere then exposed to the punishing solar wind.

Acer's New All-in-One Desktops and Nettops

Acer on Wednesday rolled out four models in its Veriton desktop line. Two of the models—the Veriton Z410G and Veriton Z290G—are all-in-one desktops, while the other two—the Veriton N281G and Veriton N282G—are nettops.

Both the Z410G and Z290G include a multimedia card reader, a 320GB hard drive, a SuperMulti DVD burner, and a PS/2 keyboard and mouse. They also have Gigabit Ethernet and come with 802.11b/g wireless capability. The all-in-one desktops feature 2GB of DDR3 memory, upgradeable to 4GB.

The Veriton Z410G measures 16.6 by 21.6 by 5.1 inches (HWD). Its 21.5-inch display has a resolution of 1,080-by-920, a 16:9 aspect ratio, and a 5-millisecond pixel response time. It features a 3-GHz Intel Pentium E5700 dual-core processor and integrated graphics by way of the Intel Graphics Media Accelerator X4500. Connectivity ports include eight USB 2.0 ports, eSATA, DVI, and VGA.

The Veriton Z290G can best be classified as an all-in-one nettop, thank to its 1.8-GHz Intel Atom D525 ultra-low-voltage processor. The desktop measures a compact 15 by 19 by 2.1 inches and comes with an 18.5-inch resistive-touch display. There are four USB 2.0 ports on the chassis.

Both nettops will be available for sale in October. The Veriton N282G has a starting price of $449 (list); prices for the N281G-UA425W starts at $399.

Trans Fats While Breast-Feeding May Plump Up Baby

Breast-fed babies are much more likely to put on excess body fat if their mother's diet is high in trans fats, finds a new study.

U.S. researchers looked at 96 women and their babies. Infants whose mothers consumed more than 4.5 grams of trans fats per day while breast-feeding were twice as likely to have a high percentage of body fat than babies whose mothers consumed lower amounts of trans fats.

The study also found that mothers who consumed more than 4.5 grams a day of trans fats had a nearly six times greater risk of excessive fat accumulation. This suggests that intake of trans fats could have a more significant weight gain effect on women when they're breast-feeding than at other times in their lives, said the University of Georgia researchers.

Further research is needed to learn more about how a mother's consumption of trans fats may affect her child's long-term health.

"It would help to be able to follow the child from when the mother was pregnant, through birth, and then adolescence, so that we can confirm what the type of infant feeding and maternal diet during breast-feeding have to do with the recent epidemic of childhood obesity," study co-author Alex Anderson, an assistant professor in the UGA College of Family and Consumer Sciences, said in a university news release.

Tip: Taking Baby Out of the Home

You may be tempted to bring every possible item for your infant with you when you head out of the home.

The American Academy of Pediatrics says you don't have to pack a huge bag. Here's the list of must-haves when you're out with baby:

- * Diapers and other supplies needed for a change.
- * An extra change of clothing.
- * Baby food.
- * An infant carrier that allows you to "wear" your baby comfortably.
- * A stroller.

Heart attack victims benefit from chest compression: study

WASHINGTON (AFP) - Cardio-pulmonary resuscitation done even by a passerby on someone who has had a heart attack outside a hospital setting seems to improve patient outcomes, new US research published Tuesday found.

Heart attacks in non-hospital settings -- whether at home or in a public place -- are a huge medical problem affecting about 300,000 people a year in the United States, the study in the Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA) noted.

The research compared outcomes in Arizona for out-of-hospital cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) for cardiac arrest performed by bystanders, not medical staff.

Patients who were given compression-only CPR were found to be likelier to survive to hospital discharge than patients who had conventional CPR (with mouth-to-mouth) or no CPR, according to the study in JAMA's October 6 issue.

The southwestern US state of Arizona in 2005 launched a program aimed at improving survival rates for heart attacks outside medically equipped settings.

"These efforts included changes in the approach to the care provided by both bystanders and emergency medical services (EMS) personnel and were based on the increasing evidence in favor of minimizing interruptions in chest compressions during CPR," wrote the authors, including Bentley Bobrow of the Arizona Department of Health Services.

The study encompassed 4,415 patients over the age of 18 who had an out-of-hospital heart attacks in Arizona in the period from January 2005 to December 2009.

That included 2,900 who received no bystander CPR, 666 who received conventional CPR (15.1 percent), and 849 who received COCPR (19.2 percent).

Researchers found survival rates to hospital discharge were 5.2 percent for the no CPR group, 7.8 percent for conventional CPR, and 13.3 percent for COCPR.

One song one choir

By: Roland W. Peterson

More and more people realize that we need a conductor
instead of a politician to run the country
You don't have to vote for him
Just let his hair grow so that it falls in front of his eyes so that he can't see Just imagine not seeing anything he still gets the whole musical ensemble to sing one song
All those people singing one song with one tune

So you get my point
Let us all learn one song
That's not difficult
Then tell us why one song
So now that we know the song
We will have one choir and one song only
Now let's sing
One song one choir

I-Pad app changing autistic children's lives

HOUSTON, Texas — While Apple's I-Pad is known for its convenience and high-tech capabilities, it's also being used to help change the lives of autistic children.

Kyle and Tina Carkhuff's 5-year-old son, Evan, was diagnosed with autism last year. Like many autistic children, he cannot talk. But in the last two months, Evan has shown astonishing progress.

"He started to play more with his brother, he is more interactive with us," said Tina Carkhuff.

The couple purchased an I-Pad and soon realized the device provided learning apps that helped give their son a voice.

"We started using the I-Pad to put pictures of the food on the I-Pad, then Evan can tap or scroll and tells us exactly what he is looking for," Tina Carkhuff said.

Tom Theriot, 10, has a similar story. Tom, who was diagnosed with autism at 2 years old, attends Spectrum of Hope, a center that provides therapy for autistic children in Cypress. The center has started using the I-Pad and I-Touch. For Tom's parents, it was a major breakthrough.

"It's a way that I am going to get to know my child, he is a joker and loves to laugh," said his mother. "We know he's laughing, but have never been able to hear about what."

Autism is a developmental disorder that affects the brain. Intense therapy over many years has proven to reverse the disorder in some cases.

Pediatric Neurologist Dr. Richard Frye said the new technology won't fix autism, but it is a critical aid.

"The I-Pad will fill in those gaps, fill in the places the brain isn't working, and at this point that is an incredible step forward," said Frye.

And for families dealing with autism, a step forward is akin to one giant leap.

Motorola sues Apple for patent infringement

WASHINGTON (AFP) - Motorola, just days after being targeted in a patent suit by Microsoft, filed complaints against Apple yesterday alleging that the iPhone, iPad and other products infringe its patents.

The Motorola complaints allege that Apple's iPhone, iPad, iPod Touch and certain Macintosh computers infringe 18 patents "which relate to early-stage innovations developed by Motorola in key technology areas."

Motorola said its subsidiary, handset division Motorola Mobility, has filed complaints with the US International Trade Commission and courts in Illinois, where the company has its headquarters, and the southern state of Florida.

The patents relate to antenna design, wireless email, proximity sensing, software application management, location-based services and multi-device synchronization, Motorola said in a statement.

Motorola asked the Washington-based ITC to launch an investigation into Apple's alleged use of Motorola patents and bar the importation and sale of infringing products in the United States.

"Motorola has innovated and patented throughout every cycle of the telecommunications industry evolution," Kirk Dailey, Motorola Mobility's corporate vice president of intellectual property, said.

Bank spares rogue trader Kerviel 4.9 billion euro fine

PARIS, France (AFP) - French bank Societe Generale said yesterday it would spare rogue trader Jerome Kerviel from paying the full 4.9 billion euros of compensation awarded in a massive fraud scandal.

"There is no question of demanding such sums from one single man," Societe Generale spokeswoman Caroline Guillaumin told France Info radio, referring to the amount (worth about 6.8 billion dollars), awarded by a Paris court Tuesday.

Kerviel was sentenced to five years in jail with two years suspended and ordered to pay back the 4.9 billion euros his market gambles, months before the financial crisis escalated with the fall of Lehman Brothers bank.

He was found guilty of fraud and breach of trust by carrying out covert stock market deals worth 50 billion euros which were discovered in January 2008 and almost brought down Societe Generale, one of Europe's biggest banks.

Economic weakness continues on Aruba

Summary of the Monthly Bulletin for July 2010

ORANJESTAD -- The Centrale Bank van Aruba (CBA) concludes in its Monthly Bulletin of July that the economic activity in Aruba remains weak compared to last year. The real turnover tax revenues (BBO) showed an economic decline of 2.0 percent. According to the same indicator, economic activity in the first half year of 2010 shrank by 6.7 percent.

During July 2010, the number of stay-over tourists edged up (+0.2 percent). The markets.

that contributed to this small increase were Brazil (+30.8 percent), Canada (+20.7 percent), and the United Kingdom (+21.7 percent), while the number of visitors from Venezuela (-16.6 percent), the Netherlands (-10.0 percent), and the United States (-0.8 percent) went down.

Note that during this period Aruba hosted the 36th Annual Latin American Senior League Baseball Championship which was attended by more than 200 baseball players from abroad.

Excluding these players, a very small decline (-0.1 percent) was recorded for July 2010. The number of cruise visitors dropped sharply by 53.9 percent, compared to the same month of last year.

The consumer price index (CPI) of July 2010 registered a deflation of 0.1 percent compared to the same month of 2009. The last time a deflation was recorded was in October 2009. Excluding the water, electricity and gasoline components, a decline of 0.8 percent in consumer prices results.

Total tax revenue in July 2010 dropped by Afl. 7.7 million (-10.6 percent) when compared to the same month a year earlier. This development can be attributed in part to an Afl. 7.5 million decline (-56.0 percent) in receipts of the turnover tax largely following the downward adjustment in the turnover tax rate from 3 percent to 1.5 percent as of January 1, 2010.

In July 2010, the money supply declined by Afl. 17.3 million to Afl. 3,221.7 million, because of an Afl. 40.9 million net outflow of funds to abroad, which was partially mitigated by an increase of Afl. 23.6 million in net domestic assets. Mentioned net outflow of funds contributed to a drop in net foreign assets (excluding revaluation differences of gold and foreign exchange holdings) to Afl. 1,511.2 million at the end of July 2010, which is still Afl. 91.6 million, or 6.5 percent, higher than the amount recorded in the corresponding month of 2009.

The above-mentioned growth in net domestic assets in July 2010 was largely the consequence of an Afl. 12.6 million decline in net liabilities of the banking sector on the public sector that can mainly be attributed to a decrease of Afl. 50.6 million in government's deposits, related to the repayment of Afl. 40.0 million in treasury bills held by the banking sector. Loans to enterprises rose by Afl. 11.9 million, mainly due to an increase in the credit lines to enterprises.

Furthermore, housing mortgages registered a growth of Afl. 3.7 million (+0.5 percent), while consumer credit decreased by Afl. 6.6 million or 1.2 percent.

Europe demands China budge on currency

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AFP) - European Union leaders said yesterday that they had urged Chinese Premier Wen Jiabao to act to raise the value of China's yuan currency, during a fractious summit in Brussels.

"We stressed that structural reforms in Europe and in China were essential, and highlighted the role of appropriate exchange rates," EU President Herman Van Rompuy and European Commission chief Jose Manuel Barroso said in joint remarks released at the end of talks that lasted under three hours. "We underlined the importance of rebalancing global growth and reducing global imbalances," the pair said, referring to concerns that an undervalued yuan skews trade flows in favour of cheap Chinese exports.

An EU source told AFP that the effort to get China to ease its policy of pegging the yuan to the US dollar, at a time when the euro has hit an eight-month high on currency markets, fell flat.

"We put our cards on the table," the source said. "We heard each other out and managed to establish a dialogue of sorts in the economic sphere. But it was not an easy summit."

Earlier, Wen had told a Europe-China business forum: "I say to Europe's leaders -- don't join the chorus pressing China to revalue the yuan."

A sharp yuan appreciation would "cause many Chinese companies to go bankrupt, casting people out of work ... and creating social unrest," Wen said.

The summit, which started an hour late, ended with Wen, due next in Rome for talks with Italian Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi, left without meeting the Western media.

A planned press conference was cancelled when it became clear that time constraints and sharply diverging views on currency, trade, representation for emerging nations in global institutions, and human rights issues, dear to the EU's heart, would not be bridged, the EU source added.

Erotic calendar wishes 'Happy Birthday, Mr Putin'

MOSCOW, Russia (AFP) — Lingerie-clad students from Moscow's most renowned university have posed in an erotic calendar proclaiming their love for Prime Minister Vladimir Putin, who turns 58 today.

The women are all named as journalism students at the Moscow State University and a spokeswoman for the faculty confirmed to AFP that the models study there.

Clad in a black lace negligee, Miss March, Lena Gornostayeva, wishes Putin a happy birthday with the message: "You put out the forest fires, but I'm still burning."

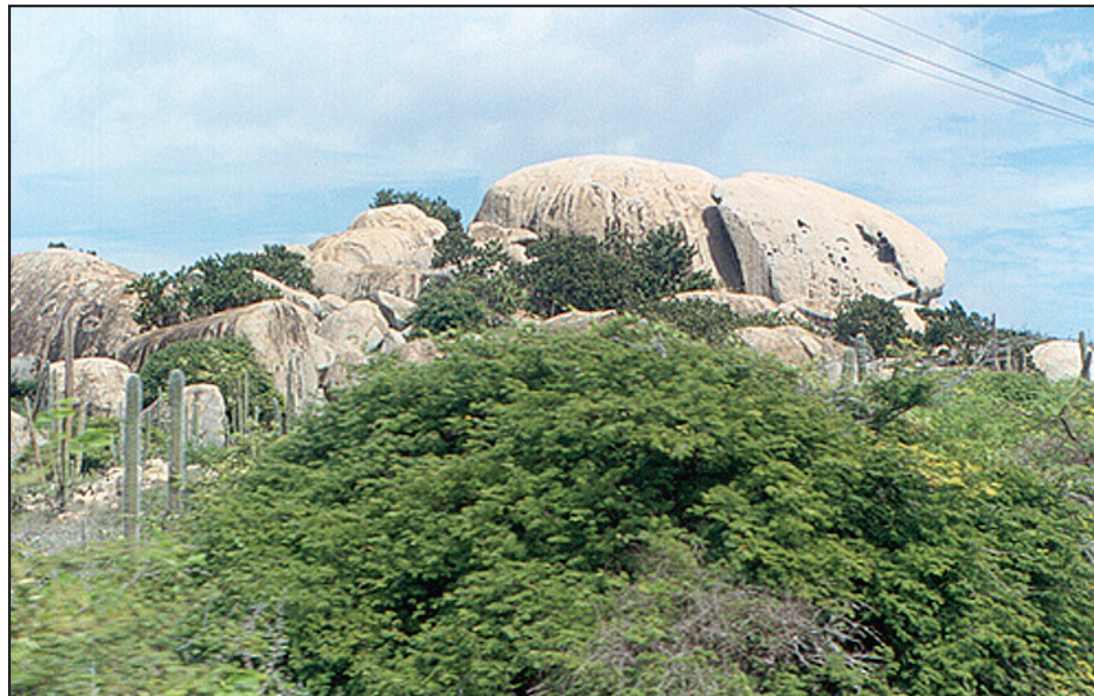

Journalism faculty spokeswoman Larisa Bakulina slammed the calendar as a "work of erotic tastelessness."

"We are not happy that they used the brand of the journalism faculty," she said. "It is tactless on the part of the publishers."

One of the creators of the calendar, Maxim Perlin, 22, a producer at a patriotic Internet television channel, said that he put it together with a publisher, Vladimir Tabak.

The models posed for free, he told AFP, claiming the calendar had an empowering message. Asked why the models were in underwear, he said: "In my opinion it's more beautiful and more interesting."

A must see while on Aruba Casibari and Ayo Rock Formations

Casibari Rock formations is a very popular attraction on the island. It is the second most popular attraction in Aruba next to the Natural Bridge. This formation is located in the center of the island, you can take the highway to Ayo, just north of Hooiberg, and follow the signs, as they will take you to these popular boulder formation.

Casibari Rock Formations is composed of two sections, the biggest one is Casibari and the second one is Ayo. Both represent Aruba's Stonehenge with its unique shape, created by the eternal trade of the winds. Geologists are uncertain about their origins, but they suspect that collision of tectonic plates created these formations forcing this massive slabs into the surface.

The Aruba government constructed walking trails and steps in Casibari, allowing visitors to reach the top of the formation. Getting to the top could be a challenge since there are narrow tunnels and steep steps, only allowing the passing of one individual making access difficult for small children and elderly. If there is a big group, reaching the top could take a long time, but the steps and rails in place are a big blessing, making it much safer and easier to navigate.

Ayo Rock Formation is a short distance from Casibari, even though it does not have any of the steps or walking trails making it the less popular.

The view on the top of Casibari is spectacular and in the distance you can see Oranjestad and many of the hotels on the Palm Beach area. Wind is continuous and that constant breeze makes it great for visitors to spend some time on the top of the rock formation and catch their breath while enjoying the view of the island.

Entrance to Casibari is free and there is a souvenir and cafeteria next to the entrance offering refreshments and souvenirs. Since its location is in the center of the island, it is extremely easy to reach, either by car or with a tour.

Casibari is a small rock formation in comparison with others abroad. It is not an attraction that would take you more than 2 hrs to 3 hrs to see. One thing is important while you are visiting Casibari, the steps, rails and other infrastructures in place make it a safe place, but you must be very careful when climbing and descending, there is no first aid place or people who can assist if an accident occurs.

Even more important with Ayo rock formation, since there are no steps, or rails, and it is less visited making the chances of getting help quickly more difficult.

If you are interested in knowing Aruba, this is a great stop, the view is spectacular and on a clear day, you can see a good portion of the island.

It is also a perfect spot for pictures taking.

I'm getting better and better, boasts Ronaldo

LISBON (AFP) - Real Madrid superstar Cristiano Ronaldo boasted Wednesday that he is getting better as a footballer and is ready to put his skills to help Portugal in the next two Euro 2012 qualifiers.

The Portugal striker scored a double at the weekend which helped his club to a 6-1 La Liga win over Deportivo La Coruna.

"I feel better and better. I feel confident and ready to help the Seleccao," the Portuguese captain said during a press conference at Obidos where the national side are training ahead of Friday's clash with Denmark which will be followed by a trip to Iceland four days later.

"Goals always give you confidence. You score, you play well and the confidence soars," said Ronaldo.

Portugal are second last in their Group H after a draw at home to Cyprus and losing to Norway.

"We're not where we should be," conceded Ronaldo, who missed both ties because of injury. "Now there isn't much room for error - we have to win."

Ronaldo said he was satisfied with his performance for Real Madrid.

"Madrid is getting better and better, we're growing and the team is improving on several fronts," he said.

"We have to continue like that to go after La Liga," said Ronaldo, adding: "we mustn't just worry about Barcelona because there are other teams doing very well, like Valencia."

Valencia are leading La Liga with 16 points after six games, two points ahead of third-placed Real Madrid with Barcelona a further point back in fourth.

Bailey wants to move out of Bolt's shadow

NEW DELHI (AFP) - Jamaica's Oshane Bailey was fastest over 100m in the Commonwealth Games heats on Wednesday as the young Jamaican looks to move out of Usain Bolt's shadow.

The 21-year-old failed to crack the magical 10 second barrier on a hot and humid night in Delhi, but he did enough with his 10.12 to show potential.

Bailey has always played second fiddle to world record holder Bolt and fellow Jamaican Asafa Powell and with both men missing the Games he wants to make a name for himself here.

"Right now Bolt is the fastest but he's beatable," he said.

"A lot of people do not know me but that's why I am here to win gold and establish myself as a 100m sprinter."

Wade out, as LeBron turns up the heat in NBA Miami

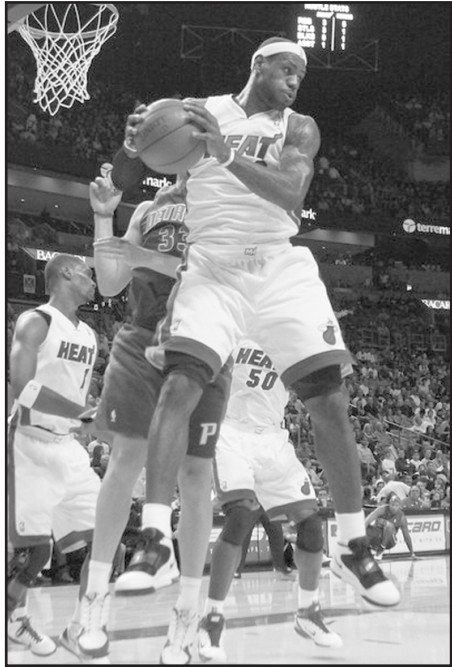

MIAMI (AFP) - LeBron James scored 18 points in a triumphant pre-season debut for the NBA's Miami Heat on Tuesday but star guard Dwyane Wade suffered a right hamstring strain in a 105-89 home victory over Detroit.

All eyes have been on the Heat since James joined the club in July, making what is expected to be a formidable NBA force alongside Wade and fellow newcomer Chris Bosh when the season begins on October 26 against Boston.

"Everyone has been waiting to see us, to see what we've been doing in practice and bringing it into a game setting," James said. "It was something I've waited for all summer."

But the superstar trio lasted only 3:17 before Wade limped off the floor to the locker room for a medical evaluation on a hamstring that had troubled him for several days, having scoring only two points in the exhibition opener.

"I just felt it pull," Wade said. "It was a little sore coming into the game the last couple days of practice and stuff, so I tried to do everything to make it go away. But it happens.

"I'm excited to see this team to play together. It was only 3:17 but this town will have a lot of time to see the 'Big Three' together," Wade said. "We will see how my body reacts to therapy and check again in a couple of days."

Heat coach Erik Spoelstra said the injury was not serious and that Wade would be evaluated again in a week, still two weeks before the season starts.

"Like I told him, if we're going to have an injury, I'd rather have it now than to have it when we really get started," James said.

James, the NBA Most Valuable Player the past two seasons with the Cleveland Cavaliers, scored 12 points in the first quarter while Bosh scored 12 in the first half to spark Miami to a 58-38 half-time lead.

"As a team, everyone has to pick it up," James said.

The Heat pulled away to a huge lead in the second half before allowing the Pistons to close the gap in the final minutes, James pleased that the team improved and stayed together even after losing Wade early.

Bosh finished with a game-high 20 points on 8-of-13 shooting and grabbed six rebounds while Udonis Haslem contributed 14 points for Miami. Ben Gordon led Detroit with 17 points.

Playmaker James treated Miami supporters to the dynamic moves he displayed for the Cavaliers, 3-point shots, spectacular drives to the hoop, slam dunk set-ups and passes to teammates without looking their way.

"To be able to be back on the court, it was great," James said. "The reception from the fans was awesome and it was great we were able to give them the same energy that they gave us."

A packed-house crowd, far more than what the Heat drew last season as a struggling club, roared for James when he was introduced for the first time as a Miami player.

"You can tell it's an exciting time for this city," James said. "Hopefully we can come through and do things we need to do on the court to keep the fans excited."

The Pistons became the first of many NBA clubs to take aim at the Heat, whose attention has overshadowed even that of the reigning champion Los Angeles Lakers.

"They know everybody's going to be gunning at them," said Detroit center Ben Wallace. "I heard them say that they know they put the bulls-eye on their back. That helps you to focus, stay on your toes, stay on top of your game."

James' former Cavaliers teammates opened the pre-season with an 87-72 home victory over Charlotte in their first game without the superstar.

Blackhawks hope to repeat as king of the NHL jungle

LOS ANGELES (AFP) – In any other National Hockey League season, losing your co-top playoff goal scorer might be a deathblow for a team trying to repeat as Stanley Cup champions.

But not for the Chicago Blackhawks who fell victim to the league's salary cap rules, saying so long in the offseason to 11-goal playoff scorer Dustin Byfuglien and numerous other role players that helped them win the franchise's first championship in 49 years.

"Our team won't skip a beat," said captain Jonathan Toews. "Everybody wants to beat the defending champs. That is something we have to be ready for."

"Some of our guys had to move on but we are excited to see how the new players are going to fit in."

The 2010-11 regular season gets underway today with Carolina against Minnesota in Helsinki, Finland. Then later in the day it is two premier matchups as Sidney Crosby's Pittsburgh Penguins host Alex Ovechkin's Capitals and long-time rivals Montreal and the Maple Leafs square off in Toronto.

Columbus, Boston, San Jose and Phoenix also start the season in Europe with games being split between Finland, Czech Republic and Sweden.

The league also brought back the successful annual outdoor game and this year it features Pittsburgh battling Washington at the home of the NFL's Pittsburgh Steelers on January 1.

The challenge for Chicago general manager Stan Bowman is to absorb the loss of Byfuglien, Kris Versteeg and Andrew Ladd and re-distribute the wealth in other ways.

Bowman did just that with the addition of Swedish forward Viktor Stalberg, matching the San Jose Sharks' offer sheet to keep defenceman Niklas Hjalmarsson and beefing up their goaltending by adding veteran Marty Turco.

"We did a lot of celebrating in the summer and it just makes you want to do it all over again," Chicago forward Patrick Kane said. "It is tough to repeat. It is not like we have the same guys that we won it with last year but the new guys are going to be hungry that will help us get motivated."

Under the new-look NHL, the dynasties of old are gone. Salary caps have brought parity into the league and almost no one gives the 'Hawks a chance to repeat as NHL champions.

But they still have one of the best one-two offensive punches in Kane and Toews and a rising superstar in Duncan Keith, who won his first Norris Trophy as the league's best defenceman. Keith also won a gold medal with Canada at the 2010 Vancouver Olympics.

Washington, Pittsburgh, Stanley Cup runner-up Philadelphia and Detroit all have a chance at making long runs through the postseason.

Detroit is the NHL's model franchise, averaging a league-best 51.4 wins per season over the past five years.

But for the first time in over a quarter century they are going to have to get used to not having hall-of-fame player and front office guru Steve Yzerman in their organization. Yzerman left in the summer to take the job as GM of the Tampa Bay Lightning.

The Edmonton Oilers youth movement continues as they used the first-overall pick in the entry draft to take Canadian Taylor Hall.

Fresh off his second-straight MVP of the Memorial Cup tournament to decide the top junior team in Canada, Hall has led his Windsor Spitfires to consecutive national titles.

The Montreal Canadiens also have a star in the making in their fearless puck moving defenceman PK Subban.

The 21-year-old Subban, who plays like he has ice in his veins, will be asked to take on a more prominent role in 2010-11 because of the early-season absence of Russian veteran Andrei Markov due to injury.

Crosby and Ovechkin have yet to meet in a Stanley Cup final but this year's outdoor game will pit the league's two hottest stars against each other.

Ovechkin has collected the lion's share of the league's top individual awards over the last few seasons but Crosby has had more team success.

Ovechkin has won the Ted Lindsay Award for three straight years as the league's most outstanding player as chosen by his peers and has been a first-team all star for the past five years.

Crosby scored the overtime winner against the United States to lift Canada to a gold medal at the Vancouver Games and captained the Penguins to a Stanley Cup championship in 2009.

End to season for Venus

NEW YORK (AFP) - Venus Williams will miss the remainder of the 2010 tennis season, including next month's Fed Cup final showdown with Italy, because of a nagging left knee injury, the third-ranked US star said Wednesday.

Williams has not played since losing to eventual champion Kim Clijsters in last month's US Open semi-finals and had not played before that since falling in the Wimbledon quarter-finals in June.

De Jong went too far, says van Marwijk

THE HAGUE (AFP) - Dutch coach Bert van Marwijk on Wednesday justified his decision to drop Nigel de Jong over his leg-breaking challenge on Hatem Ben Arfa by saying the defensive midfielder had overstepped the line.

"Nigel really went too far," van Marwijk told the ANP agency.

"It's a shame. There are only losers in this affair: Ben Arfa has a double fracture.

Nigel has also lost out. And I can no longer call on a player who was in great form for two very important matches.

Van Marwijk has criticised Manchester City's de Jong for his aggressive play on a number of occasions, notably after friendly matches this year against Japan and Paraguay.

The defensive midfielder was also widely considered fortunate to have escaped punishment for a chest-high foul on Xabi Alonso during the Netherlands' 1-0 defeat by Spain in the World Cup final in July.

French international winger Ben Arfa was stretchered off following a heavy challenge by de Jong after four minutes of Newcastle's 2-1 Premier League defeat at City on Sunday.

Newcastle later announced that the 23-year-old, who is on loan from Marseille, had broken the tibia and fibula of his left leg and is therefore likely to miss much of the rest of the season.

De Jong was not penalised for the challenge.

The Netherlands take on Moldova on October 8 and Sweden on October 12 as part of their Euro 2012 qualifying campaign.

Moss rejoins Vikings as top target for Favre

MINNEAPOLIS (AFP) - Seven-time All-Star receiver Randy Moss was traded from the New England Patriots to the Minnesota Vikings yesterday, giving Brett Favre a major gift four days before his 41st birthday.

The Patriots, who reportedly received a third-round pick in the National Football League Draft for the 33-year-old playmaker, were in the last year of a three-season deal with Moss worth 27 million dollars.

Moss repeatedly said he did not expect to return to New England next season and the Patriots obliged him two weeks before the NFL trade deadline by sending him to the team where he became a star when he arrived in 1998.

Moss helped lift the Vikings within a game of the Super Bowl in his first stint with the Vikings and this time could revive a team that has lost two of its first three games without a top-level receiving threat for Favre's passes.

"He's a tremendous competitor and was an integral member of the Vikings organization," Vikings coach Brad Childress said. "Ownership was completely supportive of our efforts to add a valuable football player to our team."

Minnesota was a game from reaching the Super Bowl last season before losing to eventual champion New Orleans. Favre decided to return once more to lead the Vikings but top receiver Sidney Rice has struggled since undergoing hip surgery in August.

The Favre-to-Moss combination could see action on Monday when the Vikings play at the New York Jets, the team for which NFL all-time passing leader Favre played before Minnesota and after his star turn with the Green Bay Packers.

In addition, the Vikings will visit the Patriots on October 31, a Halloween showdown that will give Moss the chance to show New England what they lost when they dumped him - or the hosts the chance to show why they let him go.

"In this business there are complex and often difficult decisions but it's my responsibility to make them based on what I feel is best for our football team in both the
